Customer Reviews

While reading Dr Jones book my first thoughts naturally were, I wish I had known about this information when my kids were young. I feel like somehow I had my head stuck in the dirt like an ostrich or I have been cheated for all those years. Feeling cheated also lead me to feeling angry, angry that our country who provides the best medical care in the world while making sure we advance in patient care year after year fails to recognize a simple low cost treatment as a solution to upper respiratory infections in our population. Why? Plain and simple, it would eliminate the need for thousands of people to seek medical care for upper respiratory issues and our pharmaceutical companies and health-care systems would lose money. If it is not considered a drug than the FDA does not provide funding for studies and the public does not hear about it. Think about it. Why would anyone need a doctor to prescribe or pharmaceutical company to test a product that is all natural and contains no side effects? This is were our country fails us, by not educating our society on natural effective solutions for our health. As I read this book the feeling all came back to me, my children suffering from allergies and ear infections year after year and me feeling helpless. Knowing an antibiotic is a temporary solution and wondering how much stronger of a dose my child would need with the next ear infection. Although my youngest is now ten all three of my children suffered with allergies and ear infections, also my son was diagnosed with mild asthma. I first came across xylitol when I was offered to do a review on the nasal product this past year, you can find my review on Xlear Nasal Spray on my blog Autumn Blues Reviews.
